Have you considered the possibilities in growing Hardy Mums?

Many of our customers are very enthusiastic about this line of the business and are finding it very profitable. Here is an example:

One of our customers two years ago bought about 500 Hardies. Last year he bought about 1500 and for the coming year he has ordered over 5000.

He grows them out of doors entirely giving plenty of room and sells mostly right from the field. The larger and nicer plants go first at from $1.00 to $1.50 each just as they are about to bloom. The cheapest go at 35c to 50c. This last season he cleaned out every plant. This looks like a very profitable business when one can buy the plants for 2½c to 3c each, and they take no greenhouse room and are entirely field grown.

For those growing Hardy Mums we would advise that if possible you put in artificial watering, and if you live in the northern states where frosts do sometimes come early, it would be very easy to set your water system going and let it run all night or as long as necessary. The moderately warm water in the fall will keep off a lot of frost. A little investment in this way may save you hundreds of dollars. Many of the best varieties are very apt to bloom just after the first frosts.

If you wish to lift and pot some early, the green paper pots are good and very inexpensive.

While we would like to take care of all orders, our stock is naturally limited, and unless you get your orders in early you may not be able to get what you want.
